It is believed that serry's agents have made many illegal arrents. I have seen Supt. Byrnes and he has romised to collect evidence when called pon to do so. The Anti-Gerry Society is also at work through its lawyer, Myer J. Stelli, and the Winter will be spent fighting the on to a finish."

Mr. Ford recounted soveral instances of the Ber little sister, Lizzie, the mainstay of the family, danced with a score of other children in "La Cigale," and carned $10 a week. Every night her older sister came from the cash counter to the theatre to enjoy a romp with the children in their play-room and ahare their supper. Gerry sont an agent to attend the rehearsais and gave his permission for the children to dance, but that pleasure was soon to be at an end.

Driven from the Stage to the Store. When little La liegaloncita dened the society, said Mr. Ford, a message came over the telephone and fell heavily on the hearts of the children. Gerry had decreed that children should not sing or dance on the stage any longer, and Manager French was threatened with proscoution in the courts if he should disobey the mandate of the settlerst.

"The distress among the children obliged to support themselves was pitiul," said he. "They wept bitterly as they thought of the long hours in the great dry-goods stores in prospect and the hard work to which they

He knows, continued Mr. Ford, "that the factory and the drygoods store are far more injurious to health, life and morals of children than their light work on the stage can ever be."

"Don't you think the Society does good?" was asked.

"I used to think so," he said. "but I don't any longer. It is a breeder of brutality. It is the only society that lives by the suppression of the parental instincts. Babes torn from mothers, used to be a great anti-slavery cry, but the Children's Society tears cabes from mothers every day, indeed, one day not long ago I witnessed a touching sight at the society's headquarters.
